

Winning doesn't always mean being first.
Winning means you're doing better than you've done before.

Good Morning Class 5!

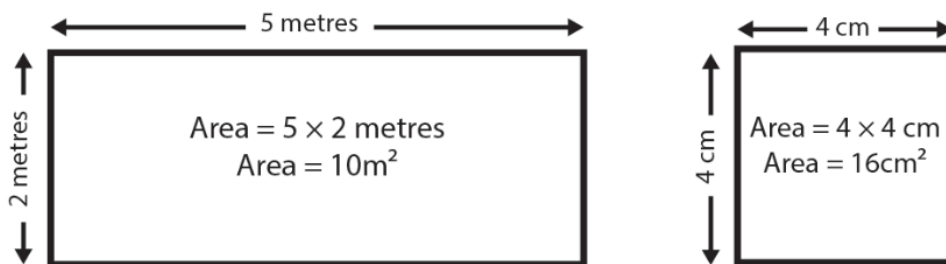

Let's start the day with P.E with Joe Wicks. Remember to have fun doing this and let's get our hearts pumping and get our brains switched on.

The next lesson is maths.

Today I would like you to measure the area of the smallest and largest room in your house.

To find the area of a rectangle multiply its length by its width.

What is the area of the smallest room in the house?

What is the area of the largest room in the house?

What is the difference between the two?

Handwriting

Practise using our learnt joins to write these word as neatly as you can. They are some of the Year 5 and 6 tricky words so you may wish to get a member of the family to test you on them.

accommodate	accompany	according aggressive	amateur	ancient

Our final lesson is Art.

This week it is national art week so today we are going to focus on art. I would like you to sketch an item or object in your house, It could be a favourite toy, an interesting ornament, even the fruit in the fruit bowl. You can even add colour if you like. Once you have sketched it then find someone in your house to tell you 3 ways to improve your drawing. Once they have told you. Then re sketch your drawing but remember the 3 ways to improve your drawing. This should improve your drawing.

I would love to see your first and second drafts of your drawings. Email me a picture!

Remember to complete your daily reading and to take some time out to do something that you enjoy.

Don't forget, any problems, you can email me.

"Everyone ready?" asked Miss Cleo nervously.

Sally Mitton and the three other children who had won the space poster competition (Kyle Norton, Sheena Singh and Jeff Dart) nodded. Miss Cleo and the four children were each standing inside a see-through mini space rocket. These rockets stood on a giant steel launch pad on the roof of the National Space Centre. Each of the space travellers had a rucksack with a packed lunch, spare clothes and a wash-kit.

Their competition prize was a weekend trip to the universe's first alien hotel – the Hotel Kazoom – on planet Kazoom 43. It was 7 o'clock on Friday night and shadows stretched across the roof. Down on the ground hundreds of TV and newspaper people were gazing up at them, cameras clicking like crazy.

Sally had been looking forward to the trip for weeks. She was SO excited. Her parents and other children's parents were also standing on the roof, ten metres away from the launch pad.

"Here we go," announced Miss Cleo, her hands trembling.

"Have fun!" said Sally's mum.

"Don't forget to brush your teeth," said Sally's dad.

Miss Cleo pressed a switch on the black panel she'd been given by the director of the Space Centre. There was a loud hissing sound and smoke started pouring out of the base of the launch pad. A split second later all five rockets ignited and they suddenly shot into the air at incredible speed. There were huge cheers and shouts from the people on the ground.
